Comprehension

Road the passage and answer the questions that follow.

In a small village lived an astrologer. The innocent villagers came to him to have their fortune told. The astrologer charged a heavy fee and made a lot of money.

One year there were no rains. The villagers were worried and rushed to the astrologer to ask when it would rain. The astrologer told the headman, "Tomorrow". The headman paid him and went back happy. He told the villagers what the astrologer had told him.

The next day it did not rain. The angry villagers rushed to the astrologer's house and threatened him. Just then the headman came running and said that his fields were damp. Everyone apologised to the astrologer. Before he could say anything, the astrologer's wife said, "Don't promise anything now. My back is hurting from drawing water and watering the headman's field." The astrologer realised what would happen and ran away from there.
